Silly Group Story

Introduction: Soon you will be participating in a teambuilding class at Driftwood Education Center. This class is full of fun and challenging activities that will help you and your peers to work together on communication, problem solving, strategy, and creativity. You may even form new friendships along the way! Read and follow the directions below for a fun and exciting activity that will help you practice communication and creative collaboration.

Materials: Photos or images that can serve as prompts for a creative story. There should be enough for each person to have one.

Directions: Students should form a circle seated or standing. Each student should receive a unique picture of an object, animal, or another chosen category. The teacher can begin a story that incorporates whatever happens to be on his/her assigned photo. The next student continues the story, incorporating their photo, and so on.

Post - Class Activity

Introduction: Now that you have all worked as a team in solving physical challenges, it is time to evaluate what you have learned through journaling. The following questions should help you reflect on your experience as a member of a team while at Driftwood Education Center. For the following questions, recall one activity you did with your group that you think went well thanks to teamwork!

How did you feel during activity? How did you feel after the activity?

What challenges did you face?

How well do you feel you contributed as an individual to the activity? What was your role?

What changes, if any, would you make in how you communicated?

How can you apply what you learned from this activity in your life?
